The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless -

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

Claims 1-5, 8-11, 14-18, 21-25, 28-30, 32-38, 41 and 42 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Mason, Jr. et al. (6,678,137).

Mason, Jr. et al. disclose a temperature compensated current sensor for an arc fault determination circuit wherein the circuit gets tripped upon detection of an arc fault. There is a current power bus (see Fig. 3) including conductors (24) and (28) and a current sensor (26). There is a temperature sensitive compensation circuit for attenuating (for Claim 1) or amplifying (for Claim 23) the signal indicative of current flow thru the bus from the sensing resistor (26). The arc determining circuitry is disclosed as being adaptable to ASIC form (204) (see Fig. 4A). There is at least one thermistor (PTC for R1 or 106) and (NTC for R2 or 108) and an amplifier (104).

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

This application currently names joint inventors. In considering patentability of the claims under 35 U.S.C. 103(a), the examiner presumes that the subject matter of the various claims was commonly owned at the time any inventions covered therein were made absent any evidence to the contrary. Applicant is advised of the obligation under 37 CFR 1.56 to point out the inventor and invention dates of each claim that was not commonly owned at the time a later invention was made in order for the examiner to consider the applicability of 35 U.S.C. 103(c) and potential 35 U.S.C. 102(e), (f) or (g) prior art under 35 U.S.C. 103(a).

Claims 6, 7, 12, 13, 19, 20, 26, 27, 31, 39 and 40 rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Mason, Jr. et al..

These set of claims are essentially drawn to providing a linear thermistor and a ceramic thermistor. Mason, Jr. et al. appear to be somewhat silent with respect to these details. However, it is the opinion of the Examiner that it would have been obvious to offer ceramic thermistors as they can operate at higher voltages and/or at large currents as opposed to polymeric thermistors, thereby, allowing precise arc fault protection to those applications requiring high voltages and/or currents. This results in increased applications for the design. As far as providing linear thermistors, their implementation would have been obvious as their response would allow for more predictable behaviour along with the thermal compensation and also allow for tracking of system performance for possible future changes.

Applicant's arguments have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.
